Item Categories

As your business grows, you might have more items in your stock and managing them becomes more challenging. In Zoho Inventory, you can classify your items under several categories. This helps you organize your stock and access them easily, resulting in better inventory management.

Item Kitting.

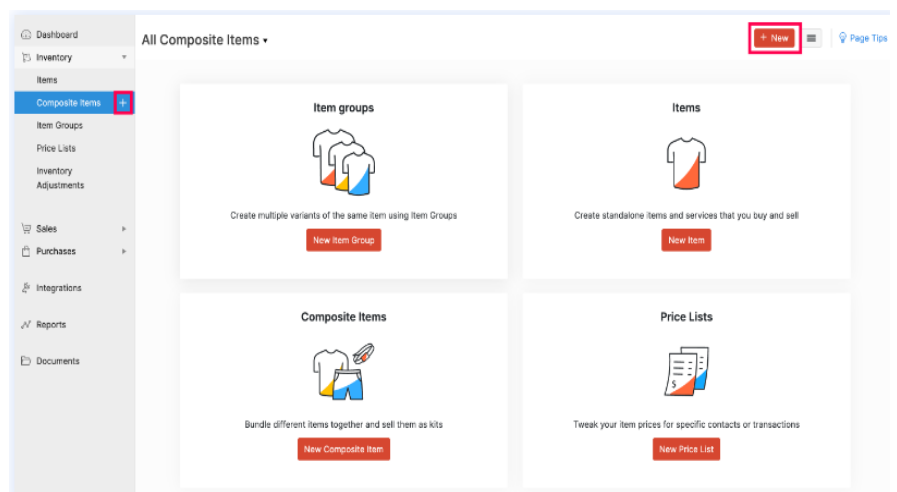

Bundle a group of items together to sell as a single unit. Zoho Inventory updates individual items and components as products are put together and sold.

Composite Items

A Composite item in Zoho Inventory is a single commodity that is composed of two or more items and/or services. Using composite items, you can create kits and sell them for customized rates as well as perform basic assemblies to create finished goods.

Note: If you have associated serial or batch items, you can select the serial or batch numbers to the items at the time of creating bundles.

ABC Classification

The ABC Classification report is an inventory categorization report that groups your items into three classes, namely A, B, and C, based on the revenue they generate and its impact on your business for a specific period.

Class	Description
A	This class consists of the most revenue-generating items. These items contribute heavily to the overall profit of your company. The items listed under this class are critical for your business and require your complete focus to ensure that these items are never out of stock.
B	This class consists of moderately selling items that don't have a low-impact as class C but not as crucial as class A. However, based on the shifting demands, they move into class A or class C.
C	This class consists of the bottom-of-the-barrel items that are usually surplus but contribute the least to your revenue. Since they take up most of the inventory space and holding costs, they do not require replenishing unless they are out of stock.
